PER CURIAM

Petitioner Letha M. Pennel challenges the child support, alimony and property awards made in her dissolution action.

Our review is de novo. Iowa R. App. P. 4.

Letha M. and Darrel W. Pennel were married in 1962. They are the parents of four children. Their three older children are emancipated. The youngest, Khristopher, born on June 23, 1973, is still at home. The parties assumed joint custody of Khristopher with Letha having physical care.

The parties have a personal residence in which they have an approximate $20,000 equity and about $23,000 in other assets. Their debts, exclusive of the home loan, total approximately $12,000.

Letha challenges the fact she was ordered to pay the indebtedness on an automobile awarded to her. The value of the asset exceeded the amount of the debt.

We review the property award as a whole. Without considering the value of her profit sharing, Letha has received in excess of one-half of the net worth of the parties as reported. We examine the property award in accordance with the dictates of Iowa Code §598.21(1) (1987). We affirm the property award.

Letha contends the alimony award of $100 per month for four years is inadequate. We consider alimony and property together. We determine the alimony is adequate.

The trial court ordered Darrel to pay child support of $65 per week. Letha challenges this award. We consider the factors of Iowa Code §598.21(4) (1987). Darrel has been employed at ALCOA for nine years. In the year prior to the dissolution he earned $38,000, which included overtime. For a 40-hour week he would earn $27,000. Additionally, he has employee benefits including a pension plan which has been in effect for nine years, but will not vest until the tenth year. No value was assigned to the pension rights, nor is there any evidence from which we can consider its value. Letha earns approximately $12,000 annually and has a profit sharing plan with an $8,000 value. It goes to her at age 62. Both parties have been employed outside the home during the marriage.

Letha and Khristopher have been given the right to live in the family home during Khristopher's minority. We consider this in assessing child support. We affirm the trial court.

AFFIRMED.
